EDMONTON BULLETIN, SEPT. 21st, 1899.

A QUESTION OF MOTIVES—AND ACTS.

To the charges made by the Toronto Telegram that the Regina Leader has sacrificed the interests of the people of the west by failing to join in the demand for reduced rates and substantial control over the Rainy River railway, the latter makes the following reply:

"The Telegram must surely be aware—everybody else is—that Mr. Oliver's opposition to the Teslin lake bargain was to a very large extent dictated by the supposed interests of the town of Edmonton, which many failed to recognize in that instance as being the interests of the Dominion of Canada; and it ought to be aware, because everybody else is, that Mr. Richardson's recent parliamentary attitude is wholly the result of private animosity against the minister of the interior,—animosity not wholly dissassociated, more's the pity, from personal or selfish considerations."

The Leader must indeed be hard hit when the only defence it has to offer for itself is the attributing of discreditable motives to others. Supposing Messrs. Richardson and Oliver to be governed by petty and discreditable motives. What has that to do with the Leader in playing its proper part on behalf of those who support it, and in turn depend on its championship of their interests. Does the Leader believe that when public money is granted to build the Rainy river railway, the public interest should be protected by providing for reduced and controlled rates? Either it does or it does not. If it does, it should have said so at the proper time. When it did not speak at the proper time, and when its after effort is directed solely to discredit those who did speak and act, it is fair to suppose that it does not believe that western farmers are entitled to, or should have, lower rates on their export product. However, the beliefs of the Leader are not of more importance than the motives of Messrs. Richardson and Oliver. The question is not what does the Leader and Messrs. Richardson and Oliver think or believe, or have as a motive. It is: What do they do? Do they, or either, or all of them at the proper time, and in the proper place, take such action as is practicable and judicious towards securing lower railway rates, and thereby increasing the value of every bushel of farm products raised in the west. However discreditable the motives of Messrs. Richardson and Oliver, or however far short their acts may be of the ideal, unfortunately there is no question, first, about the inaction of the Leader when every interest which it is supposed to represent required its action, and, second, about its subsequent endeavor (see the above quotation) to discredit those who did take action.

Just a word as to the motives so sweepingly and so confidently attributed by the Leader. By what authority does the Leader make its assertion of motive in the above quotation. It would be interesting to know. If the statement is worth making it should be worth proving. Mr. Oliver gave in parliament his reasons for opposing the Teslin railway, and the advancement of the interests of the town of Edmonton was not one of them. His facts and reasons have not been contradicted or gainsayed then or since, in parliament or out of it. It is easy for any one to suppose that Mr. Oliver is anxious for the prosperity and progress of the town in which he lives, and the district which he represents, and it is quite possible for the Leader to suppose that this motive—if it existed,—was the chief influence governing his vote. But with all due deference the Leader's supposition is not absolute proof of something of which neither it nor any one else—except the person concerned—can have absolute knowledge. Why should the Leader suppose Mr. Oliver's vote on the Teslin railway to be governed by local interests, when the interests of those who are its support cut such little figure in its course in connection with the Rainy river railway?

As to Mr. Richardson's motives, and his private animosity against the minister of interior. What in the name of sense has the question of Mr. Richardson's private animosities to do with the question of lower freight rates on Regina farmer's grain. And again, where is the Leader's proof? Does the fact that an effort has been made by alleged friends of the government to destroy the value of Mr. Richardson's newspaper, and to discredit Mr. Richardson himself, prove animosity on his part. It might very well justify it, but does not in any degree prove it.

Great though the demerits of Messrs. Richardson and Oliver undoubtedly are, and discreditable though their motives may be, the men themselves are not of sufficient importance—do not fill a space sufficiently large in the public eye,—to enable the Leader to hide its abandonment of western interests on the railway question behind their imperfections.

NO EVICTION OF PIONEERS.

Some time ago a discussion took place between some of the Manitoba papers regarding the treatment accorded by the government to some English speaking settlers in a recently made Doukhobor reserve, near Devil's lake, Assa. The BULLETIN made the unpardonable mistake of accepting as fact what appeared in the editorial columns of the Free Press on the subject, and commented accordingly. The comment was unfavorable to the department of the interior, with the saving clause: Provided the statements were correct.

The department has seen fit to notice the comment sufficiently to correct the impression created by the Free Press that English speaking settlers were being either evicted from their lands in favor of Doukhobors, or compelled to pay for them on the flimsy plea that the lands were unsurveyed. The department writes as follows:

"In reference to this particular settlement, some few English families have been there for the last ten years. Although the townships they are settled in are now within the Doukhobor reservation the rights of any and everybody settled on lands previous to a reservation being made are in every case respected by the department, and in all cases the reservation is made subject to these rights. These English settlers squatted in unsurveyed townships, and as soon as a survey is made they can, within three months make homestead entry, and although for many years back settlers have been warned not to squat on unsurveyed lands, still the department has in the past done everything possible to protect their interests, and when necessary and it has been found practicable, have arranged an exchange of land, so that they were able to secure for homestead the lands they had resided on. These settlers at Devil's lake will be treated as all others are treated, and they have not and will not be compelled or asked to buy their lands or move off.

"In addition to this these few families made representations that for years they had been getting their hay and wood in adjoining townships, and in order that there might not be a vestige of ground for complaint on their part, the department has in the meantime, reserved from settlement a half township near them."

The BULLETIN is more than pleased to publish the foregoing, in order to remove any impression that has been created by its too comprehensive and undiscriminating apologist that the present government is, or can be, guilty of such acts of atrocity against the pioneers as the late government was.

THE PORK PACKING INDUSTRY.

C. Gallagher, the largest local dealer in cured and fresh meats, gave the BULLETIN the following interesting figures and information which show the importance of the pork packing industry here. As the Edmonton pork packing company is not now in active operation, Mr. Gallagher does the bulk of the buying and curing for export trade, hence his figures give a good idea of the extent of the industry here. Since the first of March Mr. Gallagher has exported, or sold for export, 200,000 pounds of cured meats. Of this 90 per cent went north. The demand from the north this year, Mr. Gallagher stated, has been fully as large as it was during the Klondike rush. He considered that this great demand was due entirely to the settlement and development of the northern country. There had also been a considerable quantity of cured meats left over from the Klondike year and this surplus was also sent into the north this spring making the total amount imported much larger than the preceding figures show. In addition to export trade Mr. Gallagher states that home consumption is increasing right along. Retail trade is fully double what it was a year ago, and, though the quantity of hogs raised in the country has increased enormously within the last two years, the supply is yet insufficient to keep the trade supplied. In addition to the cured meat export trade there are, on an average, two cars of live hogs shipped from the station every week, and on some trains two and three cars.

WHEAT PRICES.

Commercial, Sept. 16: Wheat has fallen 2½c a bushel during the past week. The higher price was occasioned by the Ontario demand. Now that the supply has overflowed that demand, the foreign export price governs, and the higher lake freight is taken off the price of the wheat. On Saturday, Sept. 9th, No. 1 hard was worth 70c in store at Fort William, and on Saturday, the 16th, it was worth only 67½c. The difference between No. 1 and No. 2 hard, or No. 1 northern, had been 4c on old wheat, and 3½c on new. But recently it had been reduced to 3c, on new. Generally 3 hard, 2 northern and 1 spring are 7c a bushel less than No. 1 hard.

Oats are bringing 25c at country points, and 29c in Winnipeg, with the likelihood of a decrease as the supply increases.

PEACE RIVER TRAILS.

A. McFee, D. L. S., returned from Peace river, on Tuesday, coming by land all the way from Peace River Crossing. The trail over the Swan hills is in bad shape owing to the rainy season, and on this side of the Swan Hills, some of the corduroying done this spring is afloat. An important bridge just beyond the Athabasca has been nearly carried away by high water. The trail will be good however in winter. Mr. McFee was nineteen days coming in from Peace River Crossing. Crops in Peace river were good this year. When Mr. McFee went out plowing was in progress at Peace river on May 17th, and when he was returning in the latter end of August the crop had been harvested.

Mr. McFee left here on April 11th. Reached Athabasca crossing on the 17th, Lesser Slave lake on May 2nd, crossing on the ice, and Peace river on May 12th. His work consisted in cutting out a trail from Peace River Crossing to Pine river, about ten miles from Fort St John, a distance of about 180 miles. There was already a pack trail for part of this distance, but Mr. McFee cut across the great bend of the pack trail north of Dunvegan, thereby shortening the distance considerably. The first 60 miles of the road from Peace River Crossing to Island lake is chiefly over beautiful prairie. The remainder of the distance is chiefly through timber, which is cut out 20 feet wide. Thirty bridges have been built, and the road is now good all the way from Peace River Crossing to Pine river. By cutting through timber the distance across the Big muskeg, near Pine river, estimated at five miles on the pack trail, was shortened to thirty chains, less than 700 yards. This was brushed so that wagons carrying 30 hundred could cross without difficulty.

From Pine river Mr. McFee examined the pack trail 70 miles further to the head of Rocky Mountain portage with a view to continuing the wagon road to that point. The trail lies close along the river through a most beautiful country with a splendid growth of vegetation, but is interrupted so frequently by deep gullies putting into the river as to make the work of constructing a wagon road there very expensive. The portage itself, 12 miles, however, offers no serious obstacles to the making of a good wagon road across it.

Mr. McFee gives further particulars as to the drowning of Hinkle, of Mattoon, Illinois, in Half way river, on the trail from St. John to Hudson Hope. Hinkle and his partner J. R. Peters were coming down the river from Mount Selwyn at the junction of the Finlay and Parsnip rivers, where they had staked out quartz claims. They had reached the crossing of Half way river and camped. On August 2nd Peters went back to a stream called Red river to look for some of their horses which had strayed. While he was away Hinkle was to try the ford across the Half way on horse back. When Peters returned he found the fire burning at the camp, and a meal partly prepared. Not suspecting any mishap he ate his dinner. Some time after he noticed one of the horses with a pack saddle on, and apparently having came out of the river. He then began to search for his partner, but without avail. When Mr. McFee reached the east side of the Half way on Aug. 3rd, Peters was still camped on the west side. Mr. McFee and Mr. Cook, of Buffalo lake, crossed the river on horse back. It was swimming deep. Peters then told them what had happened. They searched, and found where the horse had gone into the river, and also where he had come out on the same side further down. He had gone in where the river was narrow and therefore deep, and where there was a cut bank on the opposite side which the horse could not climb up. Mr. McFee went on to Hudson's Hope to complete his examination of the trail, and returned to the Half way on the 6th. A Montreal party, who were coming down the river on a raft, also landed at the Half way on the same day. All hands searched again and found where the horse had come out of the water on the east side, and then returned to the west side, leaving no doubt as to Hinkle's death. Peters then gave up the search and came down to St. John. But there he hired another man and went back again to search, but without avail. Peters then came down to Peace River Crossing, and Mr. McFee passed him there on his way home.

While at St. John Mr. McFee met the Beaver Indians who trade at that post. They had just come in from the Nelson. They were quite friendly. The only reason they did not meet the treaty commissioners was that they were compelled to go and hunt before the commissioners came.

Three of the prospectors who wintered at the Forks of the Nelson died. They were Tottingham, James Nolin, of Wyoming, and a Welshman whose name Mr. McFee did not learn.

A man named Richardson died and was buried at St. John.

Mr. McFee is delighted with the appearance and advantages of the Peace river country. There is a grand field for settlement there when the region become more accessible. There is abundance of good sawing timber on the Peace, both spruce and cottonwood. Some of the latter are five feet in thickness.

ADDRESSES TO ARCHBISHOP BRUCHESI.

The presentation of formal addresses from the Catholics of Edmonton to Monsigneur Bruchesi, Archbishop of Montreal, took place on Monday evening in St. Joachim's church. There was a large attendance of parishoners, and some visitors. At half past seven His Grace accompanied by Bishop Legal, Rev. Father Vaillant, canon of St. James, Montreal; Rev. Fathers Leduc, Lacombe, Lestanc, Morin, and others appeared and took their places before the alter. His Grace, the Archbishop, occupied a seat beneath a canopy which had been erected at the side of the altar space. The first address was read by A. Prince, accompanied by Geo. Roy, and was from the French Catholic residents of the parish. The second was from the English speaking Catholics and was read by C. Gallagher, accompanied by Messrs. A. R. Chisholm and T. P. Cairney.

After the addresses had been read and presented His Grace replied eloquently and forcibly, first in French and then in English. In effect he said:

I am happy to be here in your midst, because you are my friends. We are all one family. We pary together and never fail to thank God for the great work he has done here. There are many faithful priests, many self-sacrificing sisters. They are truly workers, but they are all only instruments of the Almighty. Great things have been done here. Many visitors now come to see your country and speak of its fertile soil, and its magnificent crops. But there is something more interesting than soil and crops, that is the progress of the Roman Catholic faith, education and civilization. What was the Northwest 20 years ago? When in Montreal college I frequently met Rev. Father Lacombe. He had been born near there, and he frequently returned to see his friends. He used to tell about the wild country. His tales were always interesting, but they were not about civilized people. They were about Indians and their savage deeds, and about the sacrifices of the missionaries. Now the returned visitor speaks of civilization and of towns, of the progress of religion. Where formerly there was but one now there are many dioceses in the west. A priest of my diocese has become the apostle of colonization. He has created eight parishes in this diocese, which will increase from day to day. Chapels, hospitals, schools and academies are rising everywhere. What progress in 20 years. When the bishop of Montreal comes he has a right to be not only happy but proud. The priests are his priests and the sisters of charity the grey nuns of Montreal. These good grey nuns have built with their own money hospitals at St. Albert, at Edmonton, at Calgary and in British Columbia. Everyone praises the devotedness and charity of these—sisters, no angels—of charity. There are also the Sisters of St. Ann, and sisters of Jesus and Mary, all sent out from Montreal. Montreal has been to the Northwest what France has been to the banks of the St. Lawrence in the work of civilization. Be assured you are not forgotten in Montreal and in Quebec. There are friends there who are interested in your fights. When you ask for help we will give it as far as possible. But you must work together. You must pray together. Prayer is all powerful. The Blessed Lord has said: "Without me ye can do nothing." Man may expend money and energy and time and talent, but alone he cannot succeed. To have the help of God you must ask it. You must pray. You now worship in a chapel; soon you will be in a beautiful church. As you have been successful in this so we hope you will soon be successful in having all your rights recognized. This is your land. It was brought under civilization by the efforts of your pioneers, of your missionaries. Shall all that has been acquired through their sacrifices be lost? If God is with you, who shall be against you? I recommend union. Be Canadians, whether English or French Before Christ came there were many distinctions. But when Christ had revealed his gospel what a difference. St. Paul said that no more they were Greeks, or Romans, or Hebrews, only disciples of Christ. Be united for your schools, for your charitable institutions, with your priests and bishops. They are your best friends and will give you the best advice. In this way you will achieve success. I am going further on, but will always have a sweet remembrance of my visit here. His grace closed his address with a blessing on the fathers and mothers, priests and people, children and sufferers, rich and poor.

At the conclusion of His Grace's replies mass was celebrated. The choir of the church rendered music suitable to the occasion. At the conclusion of the mass His Grace held an informal reception in the presbytery, when a large number of ladies and gentlemen were presented.

ATHABASCA LANDING.

Const. MacGillycuddy, N. W. M. P., came in from the Landing Monday with a half-breed prisoner named Torongeau, sentenced by W. L. Wood, J. P., to two months at the Fort for stealing from a trader named McDonald at McMurray.

Const. McGillycuddy left the Landing on Sunday noon. The scrip commissioners were expected to arrive there that night and teams to bring them in were met on their way out. Half a dozen teams with Colin Fraser's trading supplies were also met. Eighteen returning Klondikers arrived at the Landing on Saturday and were waiting there for teams to bring them in. Among the returning men were Moloney, of the Clatworthy expedition and Henry, an Irish Frenchman, and two French companions who went north with Leon Bureau. They will be in about the end of the week.

J. K. Cornwall, trader of Lesser Slave lake, left for the lake on Saturday with one York boat.

Peter Luted is at the Landing with supplies waiting for the commissioners to arrive. It was thought they would issue scrip there on arrival.

Dr. Brown, Swiggert and others are preparing to pull out for Great Slave lake.

Nagle & Hislop's boats are expected up any day.

Wm. Gordon is putting up a restaurant. This will make two restaurants at the Landing.

THE Medicine Hat News contains a very full report of the banquet to John Niblock, divisional superintendent of the C. P. R., on the occasion of his removal to Calgary. Thos. Tweed was chairman and Mr. Finlay vice-chairman. The people of Medicine Hat did honor to themselves in honoring the man who has identified himself so closely with all the best interests of the place and been so unsparing in the employment of time and energy on its behalf. While Mr. Niblock's efforts centered at Medicine Hat, in his great work—the Medicine Hat general hospital—the benefit was not limited to the town but extended far and wide throughout the Territories. As an enterprising and philanthropic citizen and a man of great ability in his calling, long may he prosper.

Regina West: "It may not be generally known that Count Esterhazy, who has been such a conspicuous figure through out the Dreyfus affair, was at one time a resident of the Territories. STONE has been broken in sufficient quantity to complete one pier and one abutment of the bridge. There will be no difficulty in getting enough stone for the remainder of the work. The trestle work out to the first pier is partly constructed and the work is being pushed rapidly. Everything is ready to go on as soon as the cement arrives. It was shipped on Sept. 7th, and therefore should be here any day.

The following item appears in a recent issue of the King's County, Ireland, Chronicle, handed the BULLETIN by W. H. Cooper: "The Dublin Metropolitan force has just received an interesting accession to its ranks. Four brothers named Kavanagh, from County Wexford, were recently examined and admitted as recruits, being assigned to the "A" division. Each of the brothers stands exactly 6 feet 6 inches in height, and built in proportion. They are of splendid physique, well-developed and muscular, and are unquestionably a unique and notable addition to the city force. The Kavanaghs are farmer's sons, and they have hitherto occupied themselves in agricultural pursuits. A further interesting circumstance about them is the fact that they leave behind them in the County Wexford two other brothers, who each measure six feet three inches in height."

WEATHER AND CROPS.

The weather has been ideal for harvest purposes this week and farmers have strained every nerve to catch up with their work. There has been no frost yet hard enough to hurt anything, except in some specially badly situated localities. Haying is being pushed as well as harvesting, and if the present weather continues there will be little cause of complaint this season.

THE NEW ROLLER MILL.

The mill and elevator of the Dowling Milling Co. on Ross' flat, will be in running order in about ten days. It is one of the most complete and up to date roller mills of its size in America. The machinery is all new and of the latest and most improved patterns, and throughout is from the great manufacturing firm of Goldie & McCulloch, Galt, Ont. This is a sufficient guarantee of its excellence. The elevator in connection with the mill is 36x45, and 40 feet from floor to eaves. The interior of the elevator is divided into seven bins, three to a side, and one between, at the north end. The remaining central space is occupied on the first floor by the receiving hopper and weigher, and on the second floor by a No. 7 warehouse separator, or fanning mill, having a capacity of 1,000 bushels an hour. All grain coming to the mill is delivered into the elevator, and carried at once to and passed through the separator and then dropped into the weighing hopper, which stands on the ground floor. From the weighing hopper it falls into the elevator hopper in the basement, from which it is carried up to the several bins. Each bin is 40 feet deep, and the capacity of the seven bins is over 30,000 bushels.

On the other side of the gang way from the delivery door of the elevator is the office, 12x14, one story.

The mill building stands close to the elevator on the river side. A passage way connects the two buildings. The mill building is 36x40, frame, resting on stone foundation. The height from sills to eaves is 40 feet. The basement walls are of stone, two feet thick and nine feet high, and the floor is of concrete. The ceilings of the first and second floors are each 12 feet. That of the third floor 16 feet. Above is a half attic. Both mill and elevator are sheeted with corrugated iron.

Adjoining the mill at its east end and towards the river is the power house, 30x36, one story with brick walls. The power house is divided into a furnace room and an engine room. The furnace room is at the extreme east side, and occupies a lower level than the engine room which adjoins the mill. The engine and great fly wheel rest on solid stone blocks brought from Galt with the machinery, and these again rest on solid masonry. The boiler and engine are 100 horse power. Water is procured from a well 50 feet deep, which at present has plenty of water.

The basement of the mill building is occupied by the main shaft, carried direct from the engine room, from which the rolls are operated directly and the rest of the machinery less directly. There is besides a cockle machine in the basement.

The first floor is occupied by the six double sets of flour rolls, and a chopper having a capacity of three tons an hour. The spouts deliver on this floor. There is a spout each for bran and shorts, and four spouts for flour, two of which have a power packer attachment. To one of the rolls is attached a steamer for the purpose of softening the bran as the wheat it goes into the roll to be ground.

On the first floor are three purifiers, size 2, a centrifugal reel, a scourer, a cleaner and a suction fan.

On the third floor are three Wolf gyrating sieve scalper, grader and bolters, a rolling screen, flour reel, bran duster, shorts duster, dust collector, and cleaner for grain to be chopped.

In the attic are three more dust collectors.

The mill and elevator with machinery will cost about $25,000 complete, and is one of the most valuable additions that has yet been made to the business of the interests of the town. The site is on the bank of the river, a few hundred yards above the northern end of the railway bridge. It can therefore be easily reached by a switch from the track; is convenient to an inexhaustible water supply; and is reached with equal ease by farmers teams from both sides of the river. The Milling Co. are to be congratulated on their choice of a site and the excellence of their machinery, not less the town on the addition of such a valuable industry.

The milling machinery has been put in by T. E. Johnson, millwright for Goldie & McCulloch, who also put in the machinery of the Fort Saskatchewan mill. The boiler and engines have been put in by W. A. Foley, superintendent of the engineering department of Goldie & McCulloch's great works, who is making his first acquaintance with the West.

The same firm also have the contract for placing the machinery in the new mill being erected in Leduc, the building of which is now completed.

GRAIN INSPECTION.

The new grain inspection act passed at the last session of parliament, with a view particularly to protecting western grain interests, contains the following section:

"Whenever there shall arise a difference of opinion between any farmer selling wheat and any wheat buyer as to the grading of such wheat, the farmer while taking the price offered for his wheat as of lower grade than that to which, in his opinion, it belongs, may insist on a sample being selected and agreed on between buyer and seller, which sample shall be parcelled and sealed and sent to the chief inspector at Winnipeg, and the said chief inspector shall grade the said wheat without delay and make a return of his grading to both parties, and if the said chief inspector finds the said wheat to be of a higher grade than that on which the price had been already paid, then the said buyer shall pay to the farmer aforesaid the difference between the price which he had already been paid and that which should have been paid in the first instance, had the grade afterwards fixed by the chief inspector been agreed upon at the time of sale."
